Vendor: Hello. What can I help you find today?

Rosa: This tea set is pretty. How much is it?

Vendor: It's 80 dollars.

Rosa: Eighty dollars?! That's way too expensive. I could buy a new tea set for half that price.

Vendor: But it's not just like any other tea set, Miss. See? It's from a famous factory in Japan. A new set from there costs over 200 dollars, so it's already a great bargain.

Rosa: That is still a little high. Can you do better on the price? I really want to take this home. It would look great with my other tea sets.

Vendor: Well, since you have great taste and really like this set, let's just make it 70 dollars, then. What do you think?

Rosa: Hmmm, thank you, but I don't know... I'll just think about it.

Vendor: Wait, wait, wait! What's your price, then? You name it.

Rosa: How about 50 dollars? I really can't go any higher than that.

Vendor: Miss, you drive a hard bargain. OK. Let's meet in the middle, then--- 60 dollars. That's the best price. Take it or leave it.

Rosa: Okay, but can you give the milk pitcher with it to me?

Vendor: Fine. You got yourself a deal.

Do you know Arthur Fry? He may not be a famous person, but his great invention of Post-it Notes has become a popular office product in the world. In fact, they are ubiquitous in your everyday life. They can be found on the computers, on the phones, in the books, notebooks at home, or in the office. Many people use them and love them.

How did Arthur Fry come up with the idea of Post-it Notes? One day, when he was singing in a church choir, the small pieces of paper in his song book kept falling out. He thought that he needed a reusable bookmark, and it wouldn't fall out from his song book. Then, he put his idea into action. He was not just a dreamer. It took him a long time to make the new product.

At first, many people thought it was just a crazy idea, but it worked. People started to love it and buy it.

The idea of Post-it Notes did not make Arthur Fry rich, but it made him happy. He was proud of it. He made it because he did not give up.
