In most companies, workers spend five days a week at the office. They often spend 30 minutes or longer traveling to and from work. During busy hours, traffic and pollution are often serious. Teleworking (also called telecommunicating) is one way to fix these problems.

Teleworkers have office jobs, but they work from home one or more days each week. Using phones and computers with Internet, they can do all their office work. Many jobs, like sales and design, can be done at home.

Teleworking has many advantages. With fewer cars on the road, traffic and air quality improve. Companies save money by using less light power or water for restrooms. Also, workers don't need to spend time taking a bus or taxi. They can get more sleep or enjoy a great breakfast.

However, some companies are slow to move to telework. They think workers need bosses to look over their shoulders, or they won't work hard. In fact, studies show that it is different from the truth. People get 25% more work done when they telework.

There are already more than 20 million teleworkers in Europe and the USA. Japan has more than 10 million, and Australia has about 3 million. These numbers are growing because more people are learning the help of this new working style. How about you? Do you like working from home?

Food safety is important in our everyday life. When food is not kept correctly, it could make you sick. The fridge is a perfect choice for keeping food safe and fresh, but it is not a magic box to keep all kinds of food. And here are some ways.

The temperature in the fresh-keeping area can be different from shelf to shelf. As a common rule, the higher the shelf is, the higher the temperature will be. Try to put ready-to-eat food like burgers, pizza or cakes on top shelves. The middle shelves are for cheese, butter, milk and eggs. Bottom shelves are the coldest part of the fridge. They are perfect for raw meat and seafood. Some fridges have a freezer for keeping these things. Make use of that if you have one.

Keeping food in the fridge doesn't kill bacteria, but it can stop bacteria from growing fast. Bacteria can grow quickly in temperatures between 5°C and 60°C. This is called the Temperature Danger Zone. If you want to get the most out of your food, the temperature in your fridge needs to be between 0°C and 5°C. The freezer temperature should be below -18°C.

Fruit and vegetables can also be all right at room temperature. Try to keep them in a cool, dry and dark place, away from sunlight. After you cut them, put them in the fridge.

Everyone should care more about food safety. These tips will help you keep food fresh for as long as possible.
