Picture that you get a cold, what will you do? Go to a doctor or turn to nature for help? Actually, there is no medicine to cure a cold, but there are some ways to make you feel more comfortable.

Nature can treat a cold. Take ancient recipes for example. Egyptians eat honey to fight colds. In Spain, people use garlic tea. And in China, baked orange peels and herbs are common.

Besides, we can drink a lot of water and get some rest to fight a cold. A hot spring bath or sun bath, fresh fruits, or exercise can help you stay healthy. It is not always a must to see a doctor.

(35-36)

There are gender stereotypes in our everyday life. For example, we think dolls and necklaces are for girls; cars and robots are for boys. A study shows some interesting facts:

First, most people think girls are weak and boys are strong. So, there are many stereotypes about toys that girls and boys should play with.

Second, many toys can help kids care for other people. When a child plays with a doll, they can learn to take good care of babies, like a father or mother.

Third, it is natural for boys to pretend they are girls and for girls to pretend they are boys. Sometimes kids want to be themselves, and sometimes they want to try something new and interesting. So, next time, let them have fun playing with different kinds of toys.
