Although people may think that men with big bellies are not healthy, as for the Bodi people in Ethiopia, it's another story. The Bodi people like men with big bellies. They even have a contest every year. The man with the biggest belly wins!

In fact, a big belly isn't easy to get. It can take as long as six months. During the six months, the men eat and drink all day. Do they eat hamburgers or pizza? No. They eat honey. What do they drink? They drink a lot of milk and cow blood. Because they all want to have the biggest belly very much, they don't exercise at all. They just sit all day.

When the contest day comes, the men will walk around on the stage. They will show their big bellies to everyone. What does the winner get? Money? A car? No. He wins respect. That means everyone thinks the winner is great! However, soon after the contest, the men will get thin. The next year, they'll try to get the biggest belly again!

Schools protect kids' mental health in many ways. In some places of the USA, schools let students take days off for mental health. Do you think schools should offer mental health days? Here are some ideas from the readers of TIME for Kids.

Sofia

Schools should give kids days off for mental health. Because of the COVID-19, students were away from friends and their family for a long time. Now they are back to school. However, many of them feel nervous easily because of their schoolwork. Mental health days can help them relax. Then they are able to come to school and get ready to learn.

Johnny

I don't think schools should give students days off for mental health. Many parents have to go to work. If students get too many days off, they might stay home too much without the care from the adults. This could make their mental health go wrong more easily.

Nancy

Kids should get mental health days off from school. Sometimes, we need to stay home to relax. Some schools do not allow music. Music makes me feel good. If we take a mental health day off, we can do our favorite things.

Hailey

Staying home may not be good for everyone. The weekend gives kids some time to rest, but they do not use that time wisely. We children need to learn to make better use of our time. Without the help of the teachers, it is not easy for us to finish our schoolwork in five days of the week. For some kids, schools might be safer than their homes.
